

You are in your car, when a massive earthquake strikes!

If a massive earthquake hits while you are driving

Do not use cars after a major earthquake, even if you need to evacuate or to find your family.

Avoid slamming on the brakes or jerking the wheel.
If you continue to drive, be aware that roads may be damaged and traffic lights may be out.
If you must leave your car on the road and evacuate, pull over and park on the left-hand side.
Turn off the engine, and leave the key in the ignition or leave the key in a place where it can be found easily such as on the driver's seat.
Shut the windows, but do not lock the doors.

When you are not driving

Do not use cars except to escape from a tsunami.

Do not use cars except when you need to in order to escape from a tsunami.

Police Disaster Response Activities

If a disaster such as an earthquake strikes, the police will take immediate action, undertaking a variety of operations to protect citizens' lives.
